

Cape Town's airport still best in Africa

The Cape Town International Airport has been rated the best in Africa for the third year in a row, Western Cape tourism MEC Alan Winde said on Tuesday (12 March).

"Cape Town International is a deserving recipient of this award. The award bears testimony to consistent dedication to service delivery excellence by the management of the airport," he said.

The title was awarded by the Airports Council International (ACI) in the 2012 Airport Service Quality Awards.

According to ACI, the next best airports in Africa were Durban, Cairo, Mauritius, and Johannesburg.
