

Certified Computer End User (CCEU), Professional Computer User License (PCUL)

The Institute of Chartered IT Professionals ICITP (SA) is Southern Africa's SAQA recognised Information Technology Professional Body. In addition to our existing professional designations, we recently launched the Certified Computer End-User CCEU (SA) designation. In brief, CCEU (SA) is a certification awarded to all competent computer users in any profession.

Studies have shown that 98% of companies worldwide now depend on some form of computerized technology in order to be efficient and productive. Because of this, Computer Literacy has become a fundamental requirement not only in I.T, but across ALL business sectors. Proving that you are familiar with and able to effectively use common programs that businesses utilise daily (Excel, Word, Publisher etc), can mean that you have computer skills that other candidates do not. This stands out to recruiters and/or bosses, making you a preferable candidate for employment or promotion.

The Certified Computer End-User CCEU (SA) certificate is awarded to capable computer users, working or aspiring to work in any profession. It validates an individual's competence in basic computer practices within a workplace environment.

All matriculants who have already passed their Computer Applications Technology (CAT) and all college or university students who have passed any Computer/IT related modules in the first or second year of study, regardless of the course or programme, are eligible for the CCEU(SA) certification through Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL).
