The Forbes and Fix Show on 5FM is described as "intelligent, witty, easy-going by nature and an impressive music knowledge". In 2012, Forbes earned himself a daytime radio show on youth radio station, 5FM. After nine years and over 7000 hours of radio time, he has decided it's time to hang up those headphones.

“ STATEMENT: Friends, it's time. I'm hanging up the headphones. Permanently. Thank you for listening ♥□

In a statement he issued on Twitter, Forbes says there is no "next radio show".

“ Radio is one thing, and I am far too interested in far too many things to make this one thing the only thing. ”

Fans on Twitter expressed their appreciation for the radio personality.

“ You have done well. Proud of you brother. Never say never! I'm watching you... pic.twitter.com/khbOsZImNT— Barney

“ gonna miss this showman 💎💎— Locnville (@Locnville) March 23, 2021 ”

“ I'm so happy you got to announce your departure this way too. Vs a weird presser that just dropped you from the lineup. You're an inspiration Rob. Now you'll have more time to play games with me?! YAY— Sam “Tech Girl” Wright (@TechGirlZA) March 23, 2021 ”

“ Rob thank you for being one of the most awesome peeps I've worked with in radio. You're definitely a dude I will always have time for in this very fickle industry. Mad respect my dude. Thanks for being kind to me.—   Jadene Tager  (@jadenetager) March 23, 2021 ”

Co-host DJ Fikile “Fix” Moeti revealed on social media that she too will be leaving the station.

“ Goodbye To The Forbes & Fix Show Officially 🙋👋

There are too many people to thank so give me the week

Our last ‘Goodbye Fixie’ will be on the 31 March 2021.

Fix left an inspiring message

“ Lastly, to all women in radio, it will not be an easy journey for you but you can succeed. Don't make it a competition, just support one another because we are all going through the same struggles. Her win does not mean you lose. Clap for her, support her, encourage her. ”
