

Amplifying the female voice

The first work week of 2018 for many was one where we heard the global female voice loud and clear on social media, with 'celebration emojis' for everything from Iceland's equal pay law to #HereWeAre, #TimesUp and #Oprah2020.

By Leigh Andrews 15 Jan 2018

Original image © Twitter's VP of #CD @TwitterCandi Castleberry on Twitter.

Here are just three examples that resonated strongly on social media:

#HereWeAre: Seek and they will speak

Last week also saw the annual Consumer Electronics Show (CES) held in Las Vegas. In response to the mostly male presenter line-up, Twitter put out a call and the #HereWeAre result was amazing. It really puts the 'ask and you shall receive' scripture into perspective! See the tweets from Candi Castleberry, VP of intersectionality, culture, and diversity (ICD) at Twitter for more:

“ When #CES (consumer electronic show) said they couldn't find women to speak @Twitter said #HereWeAre and it was https://t.co/IJ5clmvFhF— CandiCastleberry (@Candi) January 11, 2018 ”

“ This group right here #CES yes... #HereWeAre was pic.twitter.com/nFPEp5a202— CandiCastleberry (@Candi) January 11, 2018 ”

Equal work, equal pay

Cue celebration emojis everywhere when news broke on the first day of the year that Iceland had become the first country the world to fully enact an equal pay law. No wonder the country is recognised by the World Economic Forum as the global leader on reducing gender inequality.

Momentum is now spreading globally, with many standing up for equal wages, whatever the job title. Viva!

MEDIA

BBC China editor quits in equal pay protest

8 Jan 2018

Oprah for president?

Adding to her list of accolades, Oprah Winfrey was the first black woman recipient of the Cecil B DeMille Award at the Golden Globes over the weekend. Her #TimesUp acceptance speech was so well received that many called for her to become US President.

The #Oprah2020 hashtag was trending on Twitter but Oprah herself is said to be denying any interest in running at this stage.

That said, 2020 is still a good two years away – and just look at what can happen in a week!

ABOUT LEIGH ANDREWS

Leigh Andrews AKA the #MilkshakeQueen, is former Editor-in-Chief: Marketing & Media at Bizcommunity.com, with a passion for issues of inclusion, belonging, and of course, gourmet and drinks! Now follow her travel adventures on YouTube @MidlifeMeander.
View my profile and articles...

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>