

IHG reveals new hotel concept in Singapore

The InterContinental Singapore Robertson Quay, carefully curated by world-class designers, architects and culinary purveyors, offers 225 studios and suites, including an expansive Penthouse.

InterContinental Singapore Robertson Quay

Designed by award-winning architect firm, SCDA, the residential-inspired property combines elements from Robertson Quay's industrial and intriguing past with sleek contemporary finishes, whilst seamlessly blending into the residential surrounds.

Residential-inspired design

Fully equipped for business travellers, InterContinental Singapore Robertson Quay houses five intimate meeting and event spaces as well as an exclusive 24-hour Club InterContinental lounge.

Quayside Lounge offers afternoon tea and curated evening cocktails. Recreational facilities such as the lap pool and 24-hour fitness studio will be available to guests looking to maintain their wellness routines.

Flagship restaurant Publico, representing the central core of Italian culture, is a multi-concept dining destination comprising a variety of Italian experiences under one roof – a neighbourhood deli and bar and a ristorante with adjoining terrazzo by the river. Other highlights throughout the hotel include New York institution Wolfgang's Steakhouse by Wolfgang Zwiener, and a bar and dining concept from the team behind Izy Sushi.

“InterContinental Singapore Robertson Quay has been created and positioned to make you feel at home, to bring an inspiring lifestyle offering to both the local community and visitors alike. With a fresh, residential-inspired design feel across the property and a plethora of dynamic food and beverage outlets, we are excited to bring a new InterContinental to centre stage in Singapore, and in the city’s most reinvigorated neighbourhood,” said Mark Winterton, general manager of InterContinental Singapore Robertson Quay.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>