

First music video from Van Coke Kartel's forthcoming album release

Van Coke Kartel will be releasing their fifth album, "Bloed, Sweet & Trane" on Friday, 4 October, 2013. The band started working on this album soon after the release of their fourth album, "Wie's Bang" in November 2011.

"Bloed, Sweet & Trane" captures Van Coke Kartel's famed live energy, still deeply rooted in rock 'n roll, but verging on progressive and punk rock. Theo Crous, from Belville Studios, was the band's obvious choice to produce this album.

The band recently launched the music video for the first single from "Bloed, Sweet & Trane": Môregloed. The band teamed up with their old friend and Fokofpolisiekar music video director, Johan Nel, to film the music video for Môregloed during their Afrikaans Verower Harte Tour in The Netherlands and Berlin in June 2013.

Available to pre-order soon

Môregloed can be purchased from iTunes soon and the complete album "Bloed, Sweet & Trane" will be made available to pre-order.

From 30 September, fans will be able to listen to five tracks from "Bloed, Sweet & Trane" exclusively on Simfy Africa. This is a week before the album is due for release in music retailers countrywide.
