SA Story of the Year shows tenacity

This year's winner of the Sikuvile Journalism Awards' SA Story of the Year as well as Investigative Journalism category winner, Suzanne Venter, led to the Minister of Health, Dr Aaron Motsoaledi, ordering an investigation into the whole saga

Venter's investigation of the decision by the Gauteng Health Department to remove mentally ill patients from a secure and comfortable place where they were being cared for, to unlicensed and poorly maintained facilities without any financial assistance, fitted the criteria for this category; in-depth journalism resulting in scoops, arising from research, perseverance, courage and determination.

She was determined not only to expose wrong-doing by the authorities, but as she puts it: "to know that I played a part in exposing the culprits who are responsible for the agonising death of the most vulnerable citizens of society."

Newspaper production, advertising, graphics award winners

The Daily Sun won the Frewin Award. This Award recognises urban daily newspapers with a circulation above 50,000. A number of newspapers had to withdraw after their circulations fell under 50,000 during the Awards period.

The McCall Award, which honours urban daily newspapers with a circulation of 50,000 or less, was won by Volksblad. The Joel Mervis Award, recognising urban weekly newspapers irrespective of their circulation, was won by Mail & Guardian.

Convener of judges, Clive Loxton, Creative faculty head of the AAA School of Advertising, says 'The competition was very fierce in all three categories. We congratulate the winners whose quest for excellence has paid off. Their attention to detail the factor that sets them apart. We encourage the runners – up to persevere in their efforts to win.

Enduring power of journalism

Hoosain Karjieker, CEO, Mail & Guardian and a PSS director also paid tribute to all the winners. “Your work is a testimon to the enduring power of journalists to hold the most powerful accountable. Long, long may you continue to do so.”

Karjieker also thanked Standard Bank for their sponsorship of the Awards.
