ANTHEM AWARDS

'Don't hold back' is a first-of-its-kind podcast series created in collaboration with Jacaranda FM, German broadcaster

Deutsche Welle and East Coast Radio.

Gauteng's beloved 'More Music you Love' radio station has added an exciting ecosystem of multimedia products like the 'Don't hold back' podcast, and winning a bronze prize in the Education, Art, and Culture category celebrates our purpose and mission-driven work, and our collaborators of course," says Deirdre King, managing director of Jacaranda FM.

The Anthem Awards honour the work of media, individuals, or organisations across the globe with a goal of social impact. 'Don't hold back' was positioned amongst the stars as other winners include Human Rights Watch, cultural icons like Lil Nas X, Stephen Colbert, and the satire show 'Last Week Tonight.'

"Thank you to all our fans who have supported us, our wonderful host Nozibele Qamngana, and the magnificent international team who collaborated internationally to bring this important bring this podcast to life!" adds King.

About the international collaboration

The podcast is presented by well-known health activist - Nozibele Qamngana-Mayaba as she creates a safe space to discuss contentious and taboo issues that matter to young South Africans. Episodes seek to inspire and encourage listeners through personal stories of the guests, who share their stories of overcoming adversity, and in so doing – empower listeners under 35-years-old to do the same.

"This international broadcaster collaboration on a podcast, is a first of its kind on African soil as we created a digital product together from scratch – a true collaboration. We are incredibly honoured to be Deutsche Welle's production and distribution partner in Africa. It's also really exciting to present the youth with an audio companion, backed by data, and produced with the utmost care," says King.
