

#BeautifulNews: The 13-year-old cyclist breaking the barriers of sport

On her bike, Aphiwe Goge is unstoppable. The cyclist speeds through the pump track with coolheaded strength and razor-sharp focus. She's here to win. Flying past the other cyclists, Goge commands the course. And she's only 13 years old. Goge was hooked on riding the moment her grandfather taught her to balance on a set of wheels. Taking her talent to a bike park, Goge discovered unprecedented freedom to boost her skills. Now, she's breaking the barriers to cycling with South Africa's first black female mountain biking team.

Read Aphiwe Goge's full story here.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>