

Debora Patta done with 3rd Degree

NEWSWATCH: It's the end of the road for Debora Patta and current affairs programme, 3rd Degree. According to a report on eNCA.com, Patta, who is executive producer and anchor on the show, has decided to pursue other interests. The last episode of 3rd Degree airs on Tuesday, 14 May 2013.

For more:

- eNCA: 3rd Degree and Debora Patta take a break... Off to seek her fortune, so to speak, Patta's ambitions lie in freelancing for international news agencies. The hard-as-nails host joined e.tv in 1998, and after many years with the broadcaster, she's ready to explore other options, says group head of news for e.tv, Patrick Conroy.

"After 15 years of service Debora wants to explore other options. We've been in discussions about the future of 3rd Degree for several months. In the end she felt she wanted to try something new working as an independent freelancer. We agreed and will now explore a different on-air offering," said Conroy

For now, the future of 3rd Degree remains undecided.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>