

More on 'Every Human Has Rights' online film festival

The Tri Continental Film Festival is divided into three categories; the right to a greener planet, the right to security; and stand up and be counted. Included in the catalogue is Amnesty International Human Rights Film Festival 2011 Best Film award and London

International Documentary Film Festival Best Film, "I was Worth 50 Sheep", a gruelling tale directed by Nima Sarvestani about a 10-year-old Afghani girl sold to a 55-year-old man. Viewers can now download synopses, watch trailers of the films and read through information about how to host meaningful film screenings. The website will then be accessible on 1 December for downloading all the films. Viewers will be able to share their film experience on social media with Every Human Has Rights, on Facebook or on Twitter (@EHHRights). Go to www.tcff.org.za for more.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>