

Teljoy brings Christmas joy to Soweto Children's Homes

It's that time of the year when our hearts go out to children in need, ushering a spirit of giving, especially to those young ones living in children's homes.

Mampedi Lentsoana (Othandweni), Estie du Toit (Teljoy) and Thoko Mnguni (Othandweni)

This Holiday Season, Teljoy is bringing Christmas a little early to Othandweni and Orlando Children's Homes in Soweto. Known as the one stop solution for getting everything from fridges, tv's, cellphones and even gaming and computer products, the well known rental company put smiles on the faces of the children at these homes, providing them with a TV set, PlayStation 3 and games.

"The festive season is about giving and sharing memorable moments with loved ones. Unfortunately not everyone is fortunate enough to experience that. Teljoy is always looking for ways to lend a helping hand, and we are happy to play a part in helping the children enjoy the holidays," says Estie du Toit, marketing manager at Teljoy

Both homes are heavily reliant on donations as they offer residential care for up to between 60 to 90 children of various ages who have been abused, abandoned or neglected. Othandweni has limited space for destitute mothers or pregnant women who are contemplating the future of their unborn children. Orlando home offers both curative and preventive services to deal with problems of abandonment, neglect and the abuse of children.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>