

APO competition has a winner

APO Group, the advisory firm for companies entering the African market or expanding their presence in Africa, and owner of Africa Wire and MENA Wire, the press release distribution services dedicated to Africa and the Middle East, have announced that journalist Johnson Kanamugire from Rwanda has won APO Group's competition invite to cover the Annual Investment Meeting (AIM) in Dubai.

Johnson Kanamugire

AIM is one of the world's largest events for Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) and is being held on April 2-4, 2017 at the Dubai World Trade Centre. The 2017 edition of AIM expects to welcome more than 15,000 participants, heads of states and governments, businessmen and investors from over 140 countries across the globe.

APO Group will provide one round trip ticket and accommodation in Dubai for Johnson Kanamugire to cover the Annual Investment Meeting (AIM).

“APO Group congratulates Johnson and is proud to offer this opportunity to an experienced journalist with a rich background. APO offers invitations each year to major African events as part of our commitment to supporting journalism in Africa,” says Nicolas Pompigne-Mognard, founder and CEO of APO Group.

Kanamugire is a reporter with The East African and Rwanda Today newspapers, both regional weeklies published by the Kenya-based Nation Media Group. Kanamugire is based at The East African's Rwanda Bureau where he covers a variety of beats including business for both the main paper and Rwanda Today, a smaller weekly specific to Rwanda.

During his six years of experience, the Journalism and Communication School graduate at the National University of Rwanda has developed a career in broadcast, print and online journalism. He worked for Radio Salus and Isango Star prior to joining KFM's digital desk in 2013.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>