

City of Cape Town, CiTi to host open data hackathon

Together with the City of Cape Town, CiTi will host an open data hackathon from 27-29 October 2017 at the Khayelitsha Bandwidth Barn which will challenge teams to solve real problems faced by Cape Town's tourism industry.

Using a range of data available on the City of Cape Town's Open Data Portal as well as provided specifically for this event, teams will grapple with the brief: "Design a digital product that improves the discoverability of unique experiences for tourists in Cape Town."

According to the organisers, we can attract more people to different parts of Cape Town and support more small business and "last mile" providers by making information easier for digital travellers to find.

If you have tech and data skills, design skills, or just a passion for the tourism industry, sign up on Quicket.
