

Online sales open for Nokia N8

Nokia has recently announced that South Africans can order their N8 immediately from OnlineStuff. Online orders are available via NokiaStuff for R4799, including delivery.

"OnlineStuff have opened up online orders for cash customers via NokiaStuff so that South Africans have the chance to secure one of the most revolutionary devices to be launched by Nokia in recent months," said Gerard Brandjes, GM, Nokia South Africa. "The N8 is the first Nokia device to be running Symbian^3 software, which ultimately delivers greater memory to allow more applications to run in parallel on the device."

Free, one-hour consultation

The first 1000 customers who order online will receive a free, one-hour consultation with a Nokia Butler who will deliver the phone and go through all the ins and outs of the device. As well as this, all online order customers will get a free silicone cover to go with their device.

In order to ensure that consumers wanting to order and pay for their Nokia N8 immediately can do so, Nokia has partnered OnlineStuff, a company that provides secure payment and order facilities. All orders and payments can be made via the OnlineStuff secure website and orders will be handled through Nokia's existing logistics partners.

MTN customers will need to contact the MTN call centre and ask for upgrades on 808 from their MTN phone or +27 (0) 83 1808 from any other phone.

Major advancements

The latest offering from Nokia's smart-phone stable has several major advancements, including enhancements across the user interface, single tap, touch and support for gestures such as "pinch-and-zoom", three personalised home screens and 2D and 3D graphics architecture. The N8 has 16 GB of memory, a 12 megapixel camera with Carl Zeiss optics and Xenon flash, HD-quality video recording, film editing software, Dolby surround sound and free life-time Ovi Maps walk and drive navigation for over 70-countries, Nokia Messaging as standard, and a six-month subscription to Ovi Music Unlimited (previously known as Comes with Music) Services.
