

Yes, it starts with us. It starts with us being ourselves in those lollipop moments as eluded to and coined by Drew Dudley, and it starts with us taking the chance, the risk, to hand out those lollipops, to smile at a stranger, to go the extra mile even when it seems like just a small thing that no one will ever know about, to reach out across invisible boundaries in our everyday lives and to do something good, something small, something that could even be someone else's lollipop moment.

In my beloved Cape Town, two locals have declared June to be their lollipop moment month, a chance to say thank you to all those who have added magic and connection to their journey.

Thessa Bos and Chantal Louw met through a mutual friend (who they have publicly thanked for the serendipitous introduction) and from that introduction, they then started the beautiful Fringe Arts store on Kloof Street.

The Fringe on Kloof is a collective of local crafts and beautiful products made by South Africans. And for 1 month of June, their window will also be the space for public declaration of thanks for your lollipop moments so get on down and add yours.

Read more about it here (and thank you to B-Guided for bringing it to my attention): B-Guided

TEDx Talk - Drew Dudley: www.ted.com

ABOUT SUE NORTHAM

Sue Northam is a curious Capetonian with a desire to discover and capture stories of innovative and inspiring projects and people. She explores initiatives that are impactful and making difference in her city. Shaping words and ideas is her thing. Sue is a freelance content and comms strategist, editor and writer. www.suenortham.blogspot.com and www.inspirebeing.blogspot.com
View my profile and articles...

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>