

Blackstreet to perform at SoulFest 2019

The second annual SoulFest concert will be taking place in Joburg this Women's Day, 9 August 2019, and will feature Blackstreet founding members Teddy Riley and Dave Hollister, Glenn Lewis and Melanie Fiona.

UPDATE: SoulFest 2019 has been canceled do to poor ticket sales. - 8 July 2019

Glen21 Entertainment's Glen Netshipise issued out this statement earlier today: "It's with deep regret that we have to cancel this year's festival. Sadly following an in-depth review of current ticket sales in our already challenging economic climate, together with our partners and investors, we as a business decided it was not financially viable to continue doing the show. We plan to regroup and plan to go even bigger in 2020. Please accept our sincere apologies to those who have already purchased tickets and planned to attend this year's festival. We apologise for any inconvenience caused. Full refunds will be made available from WebTickets over the next few days."

This year's line-up was tailored for the authentic R&B fan, and will again showcase three international icon headliners.

Blackstreet

Founded in 1991, this iconic Grammy winning musical outfit released sing along hit singles for over a decade. With hits like 'Don't Leave Me', 'No Diggity' and 'Money Can't Buy Me Love', their music made all hit lists over a span of over 10 years.

Glenn Lewis

This Canadian neo-soul sensation launched his career in the late 1990's with a string of hit single and boasts three chart topping albums under his belt. He released his last album in 2013 and has a featured track with Melanie Fiona. His catalog of music hosts one of the highest played scores at weddings across the globe.

Melanie Fiona

Once in a group with rapper Drake, this singer and song writer started her solo career by touring the US with Kanye West. She has released hit singles over the years and has become a household name with her sultry soulful voice.
