

Facebook can now fact-check news in African languages

By Shereesa Mbooley

16 Aug 2019

Facebook on Wednesday announced a partnership with fact-checking company Africa Check to bring local African language support to its third-party Fact-Checking programme.

Image credit: Simon Steinberger from Pxabay.

The programme analyses the accuracy of news and other information on Facebook, ensuring that users don't absorb or spread misinformation.

Facebook Africa launches third-party fact-checking w/ Africa Check, AFP

4 Oct 2018

“We continue to make significant investments in our efforts to fight the spread of false news on our platform, whilst building supportive, safe, informed and inclusive communities,” said the company’s Africa public policy head, Kojo Boakye in a statement.

The move will help the social network improve its ability to fact-check information in local African languages.

These languages include Nigeria's Yoruba and Igbo, Kenya's Swahili and Senegal's Wolof.

Reducing fake news during elections in Africa

Akua Gyekye 13 Feb 2019

In South Africa, the social network will fact-check information in Zulu, Sotho, Northern Sotho, Setswana, Southern Ndebele, and Afrikaans.

ABOUT SHEREESA MOODLEY

Shereesa is a passionate writer who often delves into the world of social media, online trends and all things photography. She is also a journalism graduate of Rhodes University and can be found frequenting YouTube and Instagram. She lurks on Twitter too, sometimes.

- The Friends cast will get back together for HBO Max reunion special - 24 Feb 2020
- 2020 emoji will include pinched fingers, bubble tea and more gender-inclusivity - 30 Jan 2020
- Disney is removing 'Fox' from the production company's future branding - 20 Jan 2020
- Google's new 'My Storytime' platform helps families stay in touch - 28 Nov 2019
- South Africa 'cancels' Old Mutual after body arrives at offices for proof of death - 20 Nov 2019

View my profile and articles...

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>